The Maori's lucky Stone

Savagery and civilization were singularly combined recently at New Plymouth, in New Zealand. Ensign Ashburham Dugdale, of Waitara, was charged that he did in the early part of the year 1895, from the bank of Mokau River, steal a certain historical stone, Te Puanga o Tainui, or the anchor of Tainui, the property of Takerau Wa ihi and other members of the Neatimaniapoto tribe, of the value of £2. The prosecution was instituted by the Government with a view to make defendant restore the stone. An offer to hand over the stone to the Government was declined, as the Government desired the stone to be given back to the natives, who attributed a number of misfortunes to its removal. For instance, the natives attributed the bad fishing season to the loss of the stone. The defendant then agreed to deliver the stone at Waitara, and arrangements have been made to place it in a prominent spot at Mokau, as near as possible to the locality from which it was taken, and to have an iron railing placed around it in order that the stone could be preserved for future generations to see. There are 10 tribes, including the Ngatiraukawa and the Ngatimanipoto, who claim that their ancestors came from Hawaiki in the Tainui canoe, the anchor stone of which was the subject of the suit.

Sans Souci.

The most lovely spot on Oahu is Sans Souci. This favorite seaside resort, which has been immortalized by the pen of Robert L. Stevenson, who resided there for months, is only four miles from Honolulu and within easy reach of the tramcars. The surroundings and bathing at this famous resort are superior to anything found in the Hawaiian Islands. Cottages and board can be obtained on easy terms. The table set by the manager is better than any offered here at other hotels. For parties, bathing parties and outings the best accommodation can be secured by giving notice to the manager.

A ritualistic Church of England clergyman in Cardiff has publicly asserted that the doctrine of the immaculate conception of the Virgin is a necessary complement of the Christian dispensation.

L. B. Kerr has just received a new lot of Sun Hat, wide brims, which he is selling at 25 and 35 cents each, just the thing for this warm weather. Also a lot of Black and White Sailors Hats, suitable for School Children; 50 Cents will buy two of them.
